

Sean Riley '92 was a standout three-sport athlete at Greenville High School who went on to excel in the classroom and on the football field at Harvard University.

At Greenville, Sean played football all four years under Head Coach Bob Stone, lettered his junior and senior seasons, was a two-way standout, and earned first Team All-Northwest

First Team All-Northwest Conference honors as a senior. On the basketball court, he played from 9th through 12th grade, lettered his sophomore, junior, and years, and was named First Team All-Mercer County Athletic Association as a senior after averaging 15.5 points and scoring 357 points for the season.

Sean also competed in track from 10th through 12th grade, lettering all three seasons as a thrower while excelling in the javelin. His excellence while a student at GHS extended well beyond athletics: he served as Junior Class President, was a member of the National Honor Society, played a lead role in the Senior play, won the T.C. Gibson Award, and graduated as Valedictorian of the Class of 1992.

Sean matriculated to Harvard University, where he continued his football career as an offensive lineman. Over the course of three seasons and after overcoming multiple injuries early in his career, Sean made 29 consecutive starts on the offensive line. His entry into the starting lineup coincided with the beginning of Tim Murphy's tenure as Head Coach of the Crimson and Sean was the only player to start every game in Murphy's first three seasons. Because he never missed a game, Sean was on the field for every one of teammate Eion Hu's school-record rushing yards. He was named First Team All-Ivy League in 1996.

Sean's leadership, perseverance, and outstanding play culminated with him earning the prestigious distinction of being named the 123rd Harvard Captain (1996). Coach Murphy said the following about his Team Captain, "he epitomizes the personal qualities that are so instrumental and unique to the sport of football. Sean has battled through adversity on and off the field to become an outstanding player, leader and teammate. His contributions to our program have been enormous."

Following graduation, Sean began his professional career with Larry Brown Associates in Denver, Colorado, before joining Accenture in 1999, where he was recently promoted to the position of Senior Managing Director. With his induction, Sean joins his father Glen in the Athletic Hall of Fame as he was inducted in 2025 as a standout member of the stellar 1967 GHS football team. Sean currently resides in Cranberry Township, Pennsylvania with his wife, Anne, and their 3 pups, Aegon, Peanut, and Barney.
